

The Scientific Age: Protocol

By

Miguel A. Sanchez-Rey

The Scientific Age is an uncontrollable scientific machine.

Gaining control of the scientific machine requires that at a certain point the general public be periodically shut-out from the Scientific Age so as not to cause any further harm to the scientific process.

All national laboratories research repositories are to be withheld from the general public. All scientific advances relevant to PHPR, and the Scientific Age, is to follow until full-disclosure becomes relevant to the scientific process.

Knowledge of the Advance Age is to be ascertain and establish by the Grandmaster in anticipation that the last task will be completed.

The Scientific Age leads to the Advance Age when the scientific state is dismantled. At that point the scientific machine becomes controllable.

The Advance Age is an age of wild strength.