

Economic Cycles of Social Hatred.

-On the Conjunction of Antisemitism-

It is easier to calculate the conjunction of planetary orbits than to understand or diagnose sub-conscious human thought and behavior (to paraphrase Sir Isaac Newton); those researchers who follow scientific models of linear rationality will surely doubt that economic cycles of hatred against social minorities do exist at all. However, it is the working assumption of this methodical approach that a psycho-social conjunction of anti-Semitic undercurrents occurs in periodical times of economic crisis, that is our contemporary and rapid societal divide, concerning human living chances.

This increasing tendency of social hate in the last 10 years is confirmed by empirical data of Jewish organizations which have historical experience in defense strategies and that try hard to combat destructive pathological symptoms of hate which turn from latent to manifest behavior. However, understanding cycles is not an easy task: first, one has to grasp that waves translate into cycles and later on into spirals of life or death; second, cycles exceed generally the observation period of one human generation; third, despite good theoretical authorship in mass psychology, we cannot learn much about empirical facts.

In any case, the human mind searches for patterns and causes of events; we are living in an artificial financial command economy of certain over-supplies which has lost the real touch with a natural demand driven economy of human needs. As the majority of people is still not trained in the scientific method of thought and communication, it is quite reasonable to assume that the conjunction of antisemitism results from the economic cycle of social hatred, i.e. a societal recycling of subconscious and dormant hate in times of existential economic fears.

Consequently, only a small elite of rentier groups is exempted from the economic fluctuations and hardships that are pressing on the shoulders and psyche of the mass of people, because the standard accounting techniques of the monopoly/privilege game offer no other options of a softer meltdown. Ultimately, the global Jewry is attributed to conduct this game of designing a hard landing for the masses after an economic flight in the heights of fiat money, although, for example, the state of Israel is facing the same socio-economic scenario. This mode of social attribution is a simple 'solution to uncertainty', because the human quest for a crises-free economy is much more difficult and pain-staking.

Stephen I. Ternyik

StephenJehucal@web.de

Research/Working Paper Proposal

Written for:

Antisemitism/Zionism Conference-2017

Pears Institute/Birbeck College/London.

Stephen I. Ternyik (b.1960)
Magister Artium (Technologiae)

Social science economist (-1985); Stephen's work covers over 30 years of management consultancy & education in such fields as capital formation, asset productivity, liquidity for entrepreneurship and wealth valuation. He is an alumni of the TU Berlin, the Henry George School of Social Science (NY/Philadelphia), Tokyo U and the Open U of Israel; in his youth, he received a professional apprenticeship in industry and worked in medical services. His overall research interest is the informatization of the human society/economy, and he participated in special financial training in Zurich and Frankfurt. Stephen is author of 10 books, 100+ articles and several online courses; he likes workshops, learning days/events and e-learning-technology, making human learning an exciting adventure or expedition. He is married (-1988), father of 3 children, likes the cantorial arts and loves humor, e.g. the saying that no good deed remains unpunished on this earth.

PS. Non-credit study & action learning (e.g. Lerntage. Symposia, Colloquia; 1980-1985), at Center for Antisemitism Research, TU Berlin (with Prof. H.A. Strauss/CUNY).

PPS. Most of my scientific and creative work is freely available in the I-Net, except a few e-books.

www.or-zse.hu/hacofe/vol9/ternyik.pdf
(www.or-zse.hu/hacofe/hac-vol9-tart-u.htm)

www.or-zse.hu/hacofe/hac-vol10-tart-u.htm

www.sociostudies.org/authors/ternyik_stephen_i/

Skype: stern.y0691