The Sociopathic Norm: An Unprecedented Pattern of Criminal Activity in the Scientific Age

The Academy of Advance Science and the Technological Sciences

[Author: The Leading Professor Miguel A. Sanchez-Rey]
The sociopathic norm sets the norm. In that manner the norm is understood as a cult in the form of a cloud-atlas mosaic that is very much a crime ring. Or what is acknowledged as being a new kind of crime ring that is both deadlier and more organized than the typical crime ring of crime lords, mafia men, gangsters, thugs and etc.

The norm is a crime ring of academic and humanitarian frauds -- that are involve in both academic and financial fraud -- but is also very hard to catch. Usually they can be caught when there is suspicious behavior amongst either and/or both groups of academics and humanitarians.

When spotted, members of the norm have very little or no criminal history. Their backgrounds, as cult-figures, is seemingly clean of any wrongdoing or fraud. They persist as detach from other crime rings and are scattered as a group in various geographic regions, or locations, with little or no obvious contact with each other. Oblivious even to themselves the potentiality of their criminal acts.
Silly and benign in nature, with false claims of both altruism and benevolence, they are capable of horrid acts of hatred and malice. The norm is nevertheless realized as a deadly or dormant crime ring base on their degrees of freedom to each other and the intensity of the cloud-atlas mosaic.

That is the closer the degrees of freedom, and the more intense the cloud-atlas mosaic, the more the norm is tantamount as a deadlier organized crime ring. Having spawned a rising world-wide pathological mass movement, the norm thrives in volatile decision-making.

For that reason, only interested in fame and fortune, the flaw and/or risky decision-making they make has led to rising pathological behavior that becomes the norm (hence the sociopathic norm). Pathological behavior of a mass-movement that is indicative of criminality, or what is acknowledged as atypical criminal behavior -- crime-like, and that is very hard to catch, consistent with an unprecedented pattern of criminal activity in the Scientific Age.