

gravitation is because of electromagnetic waves in space the more the space expands the more the molecules start to get separated and the more electromagnetic waves are produced and whenever a molecule in some mass is separated electromagnetic waves push the masses toward each other the reason for electrostatics is because the protons and electrons are aligned so that no proton come near a proton and no electron near an electron so that maximum amount of space is passed through at any moment